Aims of Module

Develop awareness of principles and practice of communication in academic and current industry settings. Develop competence in appropriate skills, techniques and processes of communication. Promote critical understanding of communication models and their application to relevant communication contexts. Examine the impact of digital communication tools upon communication postulates.

Learning Outcomes for Module

On completion of this module, students are expected to be able to:

- 1 Produce written communication that is clear, coherent, literate and appropriate to purpose and target audiences.
- 2 Recognise, discuss and critique essential principles, concepts and models within the communication process.
- 3 Apply communication principles and models to practical professional contexts
- 4 Demonstrate the ability to evaluate information from a variety of sources and reference sources appropriately.
- 5 Demonstrate a professional sense of procedure and presentation in writing assignments, meeting deadlines, proofreading and revising documents prior to submission.

Indicative Module Content

Conventions of academic and professional writing are examined and practiced. Examine the role of audience, genre and purpose. Grammar, proofreading, editing and summarising. Citing and referencing. Communication contexts and models are discussed and critiqued. The role of the behavioural sciences in communication is studied. Channels and media of communication are considered. The impact of digital communication practices is analysed.

Module Delivery

This is a workshop based course, supplemented with library sessions and guest lectures. The workshops consist of lectures, which are then discussed in class. Elements of the lecture are then put into practice in a class exercise in order to underpin learning. Students are expected to contribute to critical discussion and engage in student-centred activities.
