Aims of Module

To develop basic skills and understanding of audio and video journalism. Practical skills will include scripting, interviewing, recording, shooting and editing. Students will also be introduced to editorial concepts including balance and objectivity, taste and decency, and the role of citizen journalism.

Learning Outcomes for Module

On completion of this module, students are expected to be able to:

- 1 Prepare and conduct broadcast interviews.
- 2 Understand the importance of storytelling skills in broadcast content.
- 3 Create scripts for both radio and television.
- 4 Record and edit media content, showing understanding of post production techniques.
- 5 Demonstrate understanding of important editorial challenges for the digital age.

Indicative Module Content

Students will develop an understanding of the broadcasting environment and how news organisations work. This will include discussion of how news stories emerge and can be developed. Students will gain knowledge which enables them to critically analyse the news agenda; gather and organise information into broadcast content for different platforms; and understand the responsibilities and challenges facing broadcasters in a digital world. They will also acquire a range of practical production skills including writing, recording and editing.

Module Delivery

FT students will be taught using a mix of lectures, seminars and practical workshops.
