Aims of Module

To prepare the student to undertake and lead the delivery of contemporary mental health nursing care, in a range of settings, through enabling a critical approach to the scientific evidence, theory-base and multiple perspectives informing contemporary mental health policies, service provision, treatment and nursing practice.

Learning Outcomes for Module

On completion of this module, students are expected to be able to:

- 1 Critically analyse biopsychosociospiritual and mental health care system factors implicated in the aetiology and recovery from mental ill-health for individuals, families and communities across the lifespan.
- 2 Critique local, national and international legislation, policy, strategies and frameworks pertaining to contemporary mental health practice.
- 3 Debate the efficacy of physical forms of treatment for mental ill-health across the lifespan in comparison to other treatment options.
- 4 Analyse the quality of care provision delivered by collaboration of teams and relevant stakeholders, using a variety of perspectives in order to identify best practice and areas for improvement.
- 5 Substantiate the role of the mental health nurse in utilising scientific evidence in the assessment of mental health and provision of rights-based, trauma-informed, ethical and professional care.
